

More fires begin in the kitchen than any other room in the home, yet studies show just 54 per cent of Canadian households have a fire extinguisher.

Despite the thousands of dollars invested in a kitchen renovation very little consideration is given to how to protect this investment in the event of a fire. Fire extinguishers need not clash with your decorator appliances. New contemporary finishes – silver and white being the most popular, are the perfect answer for matching today's high kitchen style with fire safety functionality.

“When purchasing a silver or white fire extinguisher for your kitchen or as a gift, be sure it features a BC ratings” says Carol Heller, vice-president at Kidde Canada, North America's leading fire safety products company. This tells you it's safe to use for a small flammable liquid or electrical fire. It also cleans up easier and won't damage the finish of your appliances.”
